

8- ICCA INTRODUCTION

The International Consultants and Contractors Association of Iran (ICCA), is a non-governmental and non-profit organization formed in 1998 to promote and facilitate the international business development activities of its members which comprises of more than two hundred and forty of the Iranian leading technical and engineering companies.

The ICCA's objectives are aligned with Iran's strategic position as an industrial leader in the region and its efforts to expand bilateral and multilateral relationships between Iran and other countries where the Association can play an effective role.

Over the past few years, the Association has implemented a strategy that targets increased profitability for its members. The objective is to benefit from the highly complementary characters of its members in order to play a major role at the global level.

In an environment marked by unprecedented restructuring, this alliance would be the result of the strategy the Association has implemented during the past few years and of the efforts made over many years by all the members who have attained world-class efficiency allowing them to play an active role in the reorganization of their business sectors.
